

Stardock's Multiplicity Software Certified for Windows Vista™

Microsoft Awards Stardock's Business Software the Certified for Windows Vista Logo

Plymouth, MI- (June 21, 2007) – Microsoft has awarded Stardock's Multiplicity software the prestigious Certified for Windows Vista logo. Only applications that pass rigorous testing procedures for compatibility, functionality and reliability on Windows Vista-based personal computers are granted this logo.

Multiplicity is part of Stardock's ThinkDesk® suite of productivity applications. Multiplicity allows users to control multiple computers via single keyboard and mouse and copy text, images and even entire files from one PC to another by virtue of a shared clipboard. Multiplicity can dramatically increase efficiency and is used at financial institutions, health care centers, emergency operations centers and in every conceivable environment. While anyone that owns or uses more than one PC can realize benefits in productivity from Multiplicity, the migration to Windows Vista has created new opportunities for use.

"I couldn't imagine trying to move to a new Vista machine from my XP box without Multiplicity," said Brad Wardell, CEO and founder of Stardock. "I always worry about missing files, settings, URLs, or other crucial information whenever I move to another machine. With Multiplicity, I was able to use both the XP and the Vista machine together during the migration period before switching to using the Vista machine full-time. Anytime I needed anything, I could copy it over virtually instantaneously using Multiplicity."

"One of Microsoft's greatest resources continues to be the Windows Development community," said Microsoft spokesperson. "Stardock's Multiplicity is an example of the kinds of innovative development that our partners continue to provide to extend and enhance the Windows Experience."

Brad Wardell agreed. "We are committed to developing software for the Windows platform. Stardock has partnered with Microsoft in the past to provide great visual content, such as the Dreams that we provide for Windows Vista Ultimate. With the acclaim for Multiplicity, business users are going to become more familiar with our software offerings.

Multiplicity is part of Stardock's new utility suite, ThinkDesk, which also includes KeepSafe, ThinkSync and SecureProcess.
